A Call to 'Wake Up' 50 Years After Malaysia's Bario Revival

LILLIAN BULAN-DORAI

A revival spread in a small tribal village in 1973. Its impact is still being felt today.

ne October afternoon in 1973, my brother stood in front of a dozen secondary students in Bario, a remote village in Sarawak, Malaysia. In tears, 23-year-old Solomon Bulan announced his resignation as the advisor of the school's Inter-Christian Students' Fellowship, confessing that he felt unworthy to lead the group. He saw himself as a hypocrite, lacking personal conviction and a relationship with God. He felt disgusted and ashamed of his lifestyle of drinking and partying, and he struggled to model what he was preaching to the students.

At the close of the meeting, a normally timid student suddenly began to cry as he also asked for forgiveness from his friends for his wrongdoings and confessed and repented of his sins. Another student piped up, then more and more, until the whole room was filled with cries of repentance.
